

L.O) I can write a sensory poem

Ears deafened by the roaring crowd, hungry for blood.
Steel clanging, blades embracing.

Chariots were cheetahs, speeding around the ring.

Deep, crimson, blood staining the golden sand.

Sweat dripping, stinging the nostrils with its acid scent.

The smell of death hanging like smoke in the air.

Intense sun clawing at the skin.

Heavy armour, protecting and restricting.

Hearts full of fear.
